SON OF NEW CASTLE MAN MUST PAY $60 PER ACRE FOR FARM FATHER WILLED HIM

Widow Of Warren Giffin To Receive $5,500 In Lieu Of Dower

By the will of Warren Giffin, deceased of New Castle-tp, Mrs. Mary F. Giffin, his wife is bequeathed $3,500 in lieu of a dower or any statutary allowance.

The son Robert H. Giffin is given the farm in New Castle-tp on the condition that he pay $60 an acre. The farm includes 168 acres of land. The son is to deduct $2,000 which his father owed him on a note. He is to pay $4,000 to the estate, six months after the death of his father, this amount to be divided equally among the other children. Then after deducting his share, one sixth of the purchase price of the farm, he is to pay the balance within four years after his father's death.

The will provides that any insurance coming to the estate from the death of the son Adonis L. shall be divided equally among the six children.

Any of the estate remaining after the above distribution has been made is also to be divided equally among the children, Katie Johnson, Demie Darling, Bernice McVey, Nanie Gamble, Elizabeth Powell, and Robert H. Giffin.

A clause in the will states that if any of the beneficiaries attempt to set aside the will, the bequests to them shall become null and void and their share shall be divided equally among the ones not assisting in the attempt.

Mr. Giffin names his wife as executor, with the son Robert as an alternate. The will was made January 6, 1920.

REVENUE CUTTER IS ASKED FOR TO HELP WATCH BOOZE BOATS

CLEVELAND, Aug. 20.—An appeal that a fast revenue cutter be stationed at Cleveland to watch the harbor for vessels carrying contraband booze was made today to J. E. Russell, of Sidney, newly chosen state prohibition agent by George C. Southwell, president of the dry maintenance league.

Admissions by rum-runners that at least four cargoes of the forbidden joy-inducer has reached the city in the last year was given as the basis of the request.

Meanwhile federal prohibition agents Fred Counts aided by United States secret service officers and Cleveland police were busy endeavoring to link up persons high in the social and political life of Cleveland with the rum-running plot which was frustrated by the seizure of the yacht Venice, together with her captain and crew yesterday.

Captain William Curry admits that there were a number of Clevelanders involved in the plot, but has thus far refused to divulge their names. Officials however, in their investigation are aided by a list found in the cabin of the captured yacht.

The contraband liquors, all of which are costly and some almost priceless, are being watched with the greatest care by a squad of city police to prevent their falling into unauthorized hands and eventually finding their way down thirsty throats.

KENNETH ENGLISH SAFE IN NEW YORK WORD RECEIVED HERE

Fears for the safety of Kenneth English, 19, Coshocton boy who has been at sea for the past 18 months, were allayed Saturday with word to the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew English, 625 South Lawn-av.

According to the word received here the boy is safe in New York, where his ship docked after a long European trip.

Mr. and Mrs. English became anxious for the safety of their son when they failed to receive word from him for several weeks. When his ship became overdue they immediately wired but were unsuccessful in locating the missing steamer.

Word from the boy, to his parents here, explained that his ship had been unavoidably delayed but that there had been no serious trouble.

Common Labor Is Shaved To 30 Cents Per Hour By Corporation — Reduction amounts To $2.06 For 10-Hr Day Since February, 1920—Labor Is Compelled To Make The Best Of It

PITTSBURGH, Aug 20.—Reduction of wages of men employed by the United States Steel Corporation, effective August 29, as announced by [illegible] Gary late Friday will have the effect of stabilizing produc[illegible] stated here today among steel men. The wage cut is the rseult of a cut-throat or "wide open" market. United States steel and the independents have been in keen competition for available orders and there has been considerable price cutting one way and another to get the business until prices were lowered to such a point that it was necessary to reduce production expenses.

An authority on steel conditions informed the International News Service today that it is unlikely, for the present, that there will be any announcement of price reductions by either United States Steel or the independents as they are making their prices from day to day, based upon the size of the order, its desirabity and how quickly it is needed.

The wage cut will have no effect on the unemployment situation. Orders in hand regulate the number of men being taken back. Trade is improving and the number of workers going into the mills is increasing. Until orders are more plentiful the cut-throat competition will continue, it was stated.

The cut of seven cents an hour brings wages down to 30 cents an hour, or $3 a day for a ten-hour day, the scale prevailing May 1, 1917. In February 1920 day laborers received $5.06 and in 1915 they recived $2 a day.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 20.—Officials of the American Steel and Wire Co. and other subsidiaries of the United Steel Corporation here said this morning that they had not received official notice of the wage cut ordered by Judge E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the corporation in New York yesterday, by which common labor will receive thirty cents per hour after August 29, instead of 37 cents as at present, and would make no comment at this time.

Heads of independent concerns refused to state at this time whether this wage cut would be followed by similar action on the part of the

RAIL LABOR HEADS PLAN STRIKE VOTE CONFERENCE ON 29

CHICAGO, Aug. 19—A "strike vote" conference of rail road labor leaders wil be held here beginning Monday, August 29, it was announced today.

The union chiefs at this series of conferences, will decide on the attitude of union rail labor towards acceptance of wage cuts and abolition of overtime pay as ordered June 1 by the Railroad Labor board. Referendum votes, now being taken in a score of railroad unions, will close September 1. Reports thus far indicate the vote is 100 per cent acceptance of either reduction or charge in overtime payments.

All general chairmen of the shop crafts will meet here August 29 at a call from President B. M. Jewell, of the railway employees department of the American Federation of Labor. On the same day, the maintenance of way brotherhood general chairmen will also meet. Representatives from the "Big Four" brotherhoods will convene on the following days.

A discussion on the future conduct of union rail labor will be made during the first week of September after the various unions have reported on their referendum votes. Chief talk of a national rail strike comes from the shop craft and maintenance of way employees.

Fuel was added to the situation today by the refusal of western roads to grant requests of labor to re-instate the wage scale in effect before July 1. This decision was frequently forecast. The roads also request for abolition of certain overtime payments.

The railway executives declared it was against public policy to resume the old wage scale as the "public demanded lower rates" which would be impossible if wages and overtime payments were not reduced.

MAYOR TISH RECOVERS MONEY LOST TO SHORT CHANGE SHARKS BY SIX LOCAL MEN AT CIRCUS

Short change artists traveling with the Howe Great London Circus, here Thursday, were beat out of $165 of their ill-gained spoils, by Mayor W. S. Tish Thursday evening. Altho the men themselves were not apprehended the money was returned to the rightful owners by the manager of the circus, before the circus train was allowed to leave town.

Six men appeared before Mayor Tish Thursday with complaints of being short changed. The amounts short ranged from $15 to $55. Emmett Senter was hooked for the $55.

It is said that money changers were selling reserved seats for the circus. They would approach a prospective victim, with a roll of bills of small denomination, and ask if the person would kindly oblige them by giving them some large bills for the small ones. In the process of counting the bills, several would mysteriously slip away Senter claimed he handed a man five twenty dollar bills. In return he was given $95 in smaller bills He complained, the man recounted the money, found $5 short, laid a $5 bill on the stack and handed it to Senter. When Senter counted the money after being seated in the circus he found he had only $45

Mayor Tish issued a John Doe warrant for the short change men. He then ordered Railroad Detective Charles Doney to hold the circus train until the matter was satisfactorily settled. The manager was found and was asked to bring his men forth, the guilty one to be identified by the six victims The manager remonstrated against this action, saying that it would be impossible to find the right man, and adding that the short changer had probably skipped out anyway.

He offered to make up the loss to the six victims They were satisfied with this offer and accepted

Feeling that the short change men should be arrested, but being at a loss for a way to find them, Mayor Tish telephoned to Uhrichsville where the circus shows Friday, and warmed the authorities there to be on the lookout for the men.

FEEDING OF STARVING PEOPLE OF VOLGA DISTRICT TO BEGIN IMMEDIATELY, SAYS LITVINOFF

Signing Of Articles Governing Distribution Of Food Is Almost Tantamount To Signature Of Peace Between Nations, Russian Avers, But Washington Declares It Has No Political Significance—Riga Scene Of Conference

RIGA, Aug. 20. — The agreement for American relief in Russia was signed at 11:45 o'clock this morning.

The document, which stipulated in detail how the gigantic work of hastening food and sanitary relief to the millions of starving Russians in the Volga district, was signed by Walter Lyman Brown as representative of the American Relief Administration, and Maxim Litvinoff for the Russian Soviet government.

The signing ceremony was impressive. It took place on the top floor of the foreign office in a room filled with newspaper correspondents from many countries to the accompaniment of the clicking of three moving picture machines, and the snapping of several "still" cameras.

Commissioner Brown read the text of the agreement to the assemblage which listened with intense attention. Three copies were signed and then sealed with red wax. M. Litvinoff in a brief speech thanked the government of Latvia, of which Riga is the principal city, for bringing America and Russia together.

Litvinoff declared that the result of this agreement was very near the same as signing peace between the United States and Russia.

He paid eloment tribute to the humanitarian motives actuating the United States in undertaling the great relief work and told how it would result in mitigating the sufferings of numberless men, women and children. He complimented Commissioner Brown on his fair-minded attitude thruout the long and wearisome preliminary negotiations.

Commissioner Brown replied:

"On behalf of Mr. Hoover I thank Latvia. My friend, Mr. Litvinoff, shared our spirit, the key-note of which was to save the children first. I earnestly hope that the work will prove of great benefit."

Premier Meirowitz, of Latvia, speaking for his government promised that it would do all in its power to help the American relief workers in providing it with facilities.

"The feeding begins immediately; American relief is going into Russian relief" said M. Litvinoff, the Soviet plenipotentiary, to the International News Service correspondent early today.

"The earlier agreement," Litvinoff continued, "was hindered because Mr. Brown (American Relief Administration representative) did not have full powers but had to refer everything to Mr. Hoover.

"The full ration for the Russian children is 1,700 calories; the American plan to give a supplementary of 670 calories for each child in the form of rice, flour, milk, cocoa and sugar.

The agreement specifies that approximately 1,000,000 sick children in the Volga district will be fed.

"The number of American relief workers will not exceed 100. The Soviets are reserving the right to veto the appointment of non-American relief workers.

"The principal difficulty was that the Americans wished to retain entire freedom of action, which would mean the absence of co-operation with us but the compromise which we have now reached over bridges this. The Americans wished to have a free hand in choosing the districts for relief whereas we desired the specification of the Volga district.

"Another difficulty was that our country is in a state of war, for revolution is a state of war, and the revolution is not yet over Therefore, we required guarantees for our protection On this score, too, we finally compromised

"Under the agreement the Soviets have the right to search the quarters of American relief workers in the presence of the American commissioner We have no right, however, to search the persons of Americans. American relief workers are immune from arrest under the contracts. The Soviet are granted the right of representation in the local organizations. It is our earnest hope that this is the beginning of other kinds of agreements with America"

WASHINGTON Aug 20 — Signing of the agreement today between Soviet Russia and the American Relief Society has no political effect on the relations between Russia and the United States, it was announced at the state department The statement by M Litvinoff on signing the agreement, that it was in effect a treaty of peace with the United States, was denied by state department officials The American government plays no part in the Riga agreement, it was said

FARMERS "DEFLATED" TILL THEY CANNOT MEET BANK NOTES

Banks In The West Feel Disastrous Effects Of The High Freight Rates And Low Prices

WASHINGTON, Aug 20.—Sixteen member banks of the federal reserve system in the Kansas City district have failed, while 60 to 70 other banks in the same district not connected with the federal reserve have likewise gone under as the result of the deflation in farm products.

This was the testimony given before the Interstate Commerce Commission when the hearing on the joint demand by all states west of the Mississippi river for reduction of freight rates on agricultural products was begun. The witness was A. E. Rumsey, governor of the Kansas City Federal Reserve bank. He told the commission that farmers had been deflated more than nad industries and that the farmer's cost of production and distribution is more than he received for his crops. As a result bank clearings are 33 per cent less than they were six months ago and bank failures are epidemic.

John J. Esch, co-sponsor with Senator Cummings of the railroad law which so disastrously "solved" the railroad problem last year, was eager to shift the blame to the few progressive legislators in the west.

"Have these banks failed because of business conditions," he asked, "or because of adverse state legislation?"

Rumsey replied that legislation in the states had nothing to do with the failures, the farmers had been deflated until they could not pay their notes at the banks.

Curtis L. Mosher of the Minneapolis Federal Reserve bank gave similar testimony. Railroad rates were too high just when crops were poor and prices of crops had been forced down below the cost of production The farmer was in an impossible situation, which could be relieved to some extent by lower freight rates

Congressman Sinclair of North Dakota, in the audience, remarked that

The Pendulum Of Prohibition

IF the "home brew" amendment added by the House to the pending dry law accurately reflects the sentiment of the country, the pendulum of prohibition is swinging definitely away from the mood of stern enforcement. The paragraph which found approval makes every man his own brewer. More than that, such legal protection is given that the modern home, be it merely a room, third floor back, in the most public boarding house or hotel, has all the statutory fortifications of the traditional armed castle. In their temper of Wednesday the congressmen barely fell short of establishing full immunity for bootleggers.

What does this mean? Members of congress are usually well informed concerning the opinions of their constituents. Is the word coming in from the districts that the people desire a lax enforcement of the prohibition law? Home brewing is reported already to be common enough in the country districts, where old housewives' recipes are being revived by modern husbands. In the Green Mountain country maple trees are yielding the substance of a beer which has its local renown. Other sections use different products. Amateur beer is ubiquitous and generally unpalatable. Yet a considerable minority has obtained a new and thrilling avocation in the attempt to supply alcohol for its own needs. That minority for the moment has the ear of congress.

In the old days, beers, wines, and whiskeys were all made by the householder. The United States was an agricultural country then and the pioneer farmers, Puritans as well as cavaliers, had an appetite which required an abundance for satisfaction. It is, however, unthinkable that an age which lives by factory production, which has taken away even from the housewife most of the arts and duties that occupied her grandmothers, which eats from cans, should now turn to crude beverages made after the fashion of 1790.

The "home brew" amendment is not a serious contribution to the permanent solution of the alcohol problem. When beer is to be allowed congress should have the courage to state its position openly. Premission to individuals to become brewers on their own behalf merely evades the real question.

Borah Answers Hughes

IT is a timely warning that Senator Borah gives to the President when he says that disarmament must be the dominant question at the Washington conference and that "any plan or any program which makes the question of disarmament a subordinate or incidental proposition rather than the main and controlling proposition will result in the future, as it has in the past, in no relief to the taxpayer and no relief from war."

This is Senator Borah's answer to Secretary Hughes's dubious dictum that "the prospect of reduced armaments is not a hopeful one unless this desire finds expression in a practical effort to remove causes of misunderstanding and to seek ground for agreement as to principles and their application." Senator Borah knows, as Mr. Harding and Mr. Hughes ought to know, that if the limitation of armament must be postponed until all misunderstandings are removed and the nations have reached a common agreement on all principles of foreign relations, there will be no limitation of armament.

The theory that it is necessary to settle all the questions of the Pacific and the Far East before adopting a plan for the limitation of armament is wholly untenable. It is the competition of armament which makes these questions serious. If that menace were once removed, the other issues would become relatively simple. At least they would not present the continuing danger of war or bankruptcy.

Too much emphasis has been laid by the Administration on the Pacific in relation to disarmament. A writer in the London Outlook sums up that case unanswerably in a single paragraph:

> The Pacific problem, for all its size, is essentially a local problem; it is of little actual interest to France, it is no longer of any interest to Germany, it cannot be said to be vital to Italy, and it is of no interest whatever to, say, Czecho-Slovakia. But if the question of the limitation of armaments is to be discussed as a local problem of the Pacific, it will not have a greater effect on international politics than a neutralization of one part of the world; it will not be a general contribution to world politics. If, on the other hand, the limitation of armaments is to be discussed as a general policy, then obviously this conference will become a very different matter. For the limitation of armaments touches not only what is popularly called the Big Three, but the little Three Dozen, or whatever the number of states represented at Versailles may have been. It is not a local but a universal question.

If Mr. Harding had really desired to deal with Pacific and Far Eastern questions in relation to disarmament, he had his opportunity in the Borah resolution which restricted the conference to Great Britain, Japan and the United States. These are the three great naval powers, the three great nations chiefly responsible for the competition in dreadnoughts, and they are also the three great powers chiefly concerned with Pacific and Far Eastern questions. The President, having strongly opposed the Borah resolution, insisted, when he found he was beaten, on plunging beyond the Borah proposals and bringing in all the Principal Allied and Associated Powers, thus raising the issue of land forces as well as sea forces. This having been done, inspired dispatches began to dribble from Washington to the effect that the President's real purpose was to effect an association of nations. Everything else was thus to be subordinated to the political expedient of inventing a foreign policy for the Administration.

It is against this that Senator Borah is protesting, and in doing so he is performing a public service of the highest value. Disarmament cannot be made a secondary issue at the Washington conference. If it is, no matter what the pretext, the conference will fail at a time when failure spells calamity.—New York World.

"HERE'S RINGER," SAYS ARIZONA SENATOR AS SPORT DRAWS INTEREST AT CAPITOL

New York Day-By-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug 20.—A midnight performance by all colored players has suddenly bloomed as the nocturnal rendezvous for "Who's Who" along Broadway. The play "Shuffle Along" is presented in an old theatre in West Sixty Third street. It was written by Noble Sissle and Aubrey Lyles, who have long been "on call" to play and sing at private parties.

It is teeming with haunting melodies and "Love Will Find a Way" promises to become as popular as "Kiss Me Again" and other old standbys. Real talent is exhibited among the dusky ladies of the ensemble and one in particular sings a "Mammy" song that out-blues the bluest blue melody ever heard in New York.

An ebony hued Theda Bara with—strange are the uses of henna—red bobbed hair croons "If You Haven't Been Vamped by a Brown Skin, You Haven't Been Vamped at All" and the night I was there she got 14 curtain calls. A party of colored people in evening clothes occupied one box and across from them was a box filled with white people whose names are quite well known in the Lobster Belt.

In the foyer between acts there is a promenade for all the world like the old days when Diamond Jim revealed his two pint pearls and Lilliputian Kohinoors. Among those I saw were Pearl White, the Duncan Sisters, just back from London, Jesse Reed, Audrey Maple, Irving Berlin, Wallie McCutcheon, Ned Wayburn, Dorothy Gish and Emily Drange.

The theatre is hot and stuffy and the scenery is most mediocre but the idea is something new and Broadway always looking for something different partially slakes its insatiable thirst. Two other old timers known as wicked ivory pounders at private banquets also make their bow in "Shuffle Along." They are known as "Onion" Jeffrey and "Sneeze"—the latter was once hired at midnight to accompany a gay party to Paris the next day and when he got over there he made such a hit that Broadway didn't see him for two years.

I spent the evening with a friend of mine who has an apartment with a back yard in Greenwich Village. He is an accomplished saxophone player and with the windows open as the night was hot he obliged with a few numbers. Facing his back yard is a row of tumble-down tenements inhabited by Italian workmen who sat in the lamp lit windows. After each rendition there were cries of "Bravo" and much applause. They called for various airs from Italian operas and he responded good naturedly. After the concert there was a knock at the basement door and a red shirted Italian with a fierce mustache shuffled about nervously. "Our leetla boy, he seek. You play. He moocha [illegible]. I bringa you dees with his [illegible]. My wife maka heem"—and he presented a bottle of Chianti.

A bullying, red faced detective went on a rampage in the Paddy's Market section of Ninth Avenue the other afternoon and black-jacked 24 people—among them women and children. The Magistrate dismissed all and rebuked the detective who did not even appear in court. An old man, partially blind, was eating a plate of a soup in a dingy restaurant where the rampage started. His soup was jerked from him and hurled in his face. While the outrage was in progress the detective is said to have shouted: "There's too damn much personal liberty in this country."

The Hippodrome reduces its price to $1.50 for best seats for the coming season. Last year the same seats were $3.30. The $2 show is almost a certainty by winter. Only three productions on Broadway are doing a good business. The movie houses are already planning a big reduction. One that has been charging $1 is to drop to 25 cents for best seats.

WALT MASON

THE COMMON LOT

Ex-Kaiser Bill rears up and roars; he says he's taxed too much, his eloquence he vainly pours upon the stubborn Dutch. "'Tis as your guest," I hear him say, "I ornament these halls; yet, donnerwetter, every day the tax collector calls. From visitors it is not good that taxes are required, yet when I sell a cord of wood the war tax makes me tired. Three kroners on my dachshund pup, two guilders on my cat, a tax upon my mustache cup, and on my Sunday hat. Can Wilhelmina sit her throne and feel no deep concern, when she must know I'm taxed a bone whichever way I turn? I have to pay a income tax like any common knave; they tax my bucksaw and my ax—I have no chance to save. I paid my polltax yesterday, three bucks it set me back; and tax collectors ever stray around my humble shack. It isn't fair, it isn't just, for I'm the country's guest, and Holland has an awful crust to touch my treasure chest." The stolid Dutchmen make reply, "We did not ask you here; and if you think the taxes high, you'll find them worse next year." Over all the world the people groan 'neath taxes, in despair, and Bill, the exile from a throne, helped put the burden there.

WOMEN! DRY CLEAN THINGS AT HOME

Try it! For a few cents you can dry clean everything.

Save five to ten dollars quickly by dry cleaning everything in the home with gasoline that would be ruined by soap and water—suits, coats, waists, silks, laces, gloves, shoes, furs, draperies, rugs—everything!

Place a gallon or more of gasoline in a dishpan or washboiler, then put in the things to be dry cleaned, then wash them with Solvite soap. Shortly everything comes out looking like new. Nothing fades, shrinks, or wrinkles. Do not attempt to dry clean without Solvite soap. This gasoline soap is the secret of all dry cleaning.

A package of Solvite soap containing directions for home dry cleaning, costs little at any drug store. Dry clean outdoors or away from flame.

DANVILLE TEAM IS VICTOR OVER BOTH VISITING OUTFITS

Nine automobile loads of Coshocton people including the local Knights of Columbus baseball team went to Danville Thursday afternoon and enjoyed the picnic at Stull's grove, one mile from town.

The K. of C. ball team lost the afternoon ball game to the Danville K. of C. team by the score of 7 to 2. Danville defeated the Mt. Vernon Catholic team by the score of 6 to 3 in the morning.

The Coshocton K. of C.'s participated in the program of sports and amusements at the picnic.

The Walhonding band furnished the music.

It was estimated that over 1,000 people from Mt. Vernon, Danville and from other surrounding towns were in attendance.

RUMANIA PREPARES TO ATTACK RUSSIA

LONDON.—Day by day the real purpose behind the suddenly professed humanitarian motives of capitalists in the allied countries with reference to the starving millions of Russia is coming to light. France is pouring munitions into Rumania by the trainload. Military activity on an almost unprecedented scale is reported from Poland. It is openly stated in the newspapers of Bucharest that within the next month all reserve officers, up to and including captains, will have been summoned to the concentration camps.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Daily Herald reports that there is no doubt whatever that the Rumanian government, backed by France, is preparing for an attack upon Soviet Russia. He says that vast supplies of munitions, especially heavy artillery, are being transported to the Bessarabian frontier by the Rumanian army and that they come from France by way of Hungary.

In London publicity agents are busily engaged in magnifying the famine with a view to creating a public opinion that will not object to military intervention in Russia at the proper time.

MAY CONGRESS ENACT ANTI-LYNCHING LAWS

NEW YORK.—"Must the congress of this country sit supinely by when it knows that a state, either affirmatively or negatively, is denying that right (guaranteed by the fourteenth amendment conferring citizenship upon negroes)?" asked Judge Guy D. Goff, assistant to the United States attorney general, in his testimony before the house judiciary committee.

Judge Goff was urging the constitutionality of the Dyer anti-lynching bill, now before congress, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is calling especial attention to his position as against arguments that the fourteenth amendment does not confer upon congress power to enact such an anti-lynching bill.

Judge Goff further said: "If the state omits to give, or withholds protection . . is the guaranty performed and the duty of the federal government discharged? I hope not, and I think not."

TWO SISTERS GET HELP

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it did for Them

Hagerstown, Md.—"I was overworked and my monthly periods stopped. My body was swollen and I often had pains so I had to lie down. I was treated by a physician, but he did not seem to help me at all. My sister had taken your medicine with great results so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am able to work and feel like working. I have been recommending your medicine to my friends, and you are welcome to use my testimonial for I can never praise your medicine enough for what it has done for me."—RHODA E. CARBAUGH, R. R. 1, Hagerstown, Md.

Women will tax their powers of endurance to the limit before giving up, and it is then some womanly ailment develops and they have to give up entirely. When a woman suffers from such symptoms as irregularities, headaches, backaches, bearing-down pains, inflammation, nervousness and "the blues," it is well for her to profit by Mrs. Carbaugh's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has restored multitudes of women suffering from just such ailments.

WOOD MUST RESIGN TO GOVERN PHILIPPINES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Major General Leonard Wood will have to resign from the United States army to become Governor General of the Philippines, as the result of action taken by the House Military Affairs Committee today.

The committee tabled a resolution giving General Wood authority to maintain his army rank while head of the Philippine administration. Representative McKenzie said the action was taken without criticism of General Wood but that it was felt it would establish a bad precedent.

TOWN TEAMS PLAY SERIES FOR BANQUET

The Diamond Demons overcame a lead of 5 to 3 in the sixth inning by scoring 8 runs and won out over the Hill Stars by the score of 11 to 7 at Red Sea park Thursday. Taylor pitched for the winners and Rodman hurled for the losers.

The Demons and Hill Stars are playing a 9 game series. The winner of the series will enjoy a "big feed" at the expense of the losers. The Demons have won 3 out of the 5 games played.

These teams will play two games at Red Sea Saturday afternoon. If the Demons should win both games the championship and the feed is theirs.

Military Music.

The importance of music in military life is now practically recognized in this country as it has long been recognized abroad. Many persons do not know that at the beginning of the World war, neither the government nor the military authorities believed or even suspected that first-class music might be as much of a necessity as first-class guns. The change in the official attitude toward music came partly from foreign example and largely from the untiring efforts of the musicians in the committee on training camp activities. The reorganization of our military music had many attendant difficulties which are now recalled with amusement by the musicians who experienced them, though at the time their humorous side may not always have been uppermost.

A New Home Remedy--A Verse And A Tune

"A song for every mood" is now offered from all nations.

WHEN next you miss your train or the cook departs, don't lose your temper. Sing a ditty! For the whole cycle of the daylight saving day, there's a song for every mood. So says Mrs. Florence Botsford and she ought to know. For Mrs. Botsford directs the musical activities in the International Institutes which the Young Womens Christian Association carries on in fifty-one cities, and has painstakingly been compiling folk songs from these natives of Europe, songs that have never before seen the light of print, being handed down from generation to generation.

"For every task of the day, from seeding to harvesting, for all fetes and occasions, our new Americans back in the old world have songs that are instinctively a part of the task or occasion," says Mrs. Botsford. "In this rich heritage of song they bring beauty that we have too long ignored. As a nation we repress our feelings, lacking their purely spontaneous outlet of expression. For lovers there are limpid love songs as picturesque as the blue waters at whose side for centuries they have been sung. For mothers there are cooing lullabies as rich as the brightly colored shawls in which the Italian babino nestles."

In the International Institutes where foreign-born girls and their mothers straight from Ellis Island are welcomed to learn strange American ways and how to become good citizens, the beauty that is their own is fostered and appreciated. Here the European mothers, pitifully "behind the times" in the eyes of their husbands and children come to toil laboriously over English and regain their family prestige. Whole families join in its frolics and classes.

The Y. W. C. A. Womans Press, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York, has just published this "Folk Songs of Many Peoples" taken directly from the lips of these newcomers and verified by research in European villages by Mrs. Botsford, who is now in Italy collecting material for a second volume.

RAILWAY OWNERS LOSE HUGE SUM IN TEN MONTHS

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., Aug. 20—"During the ten months from September 1, 1920, to June 30, 1921, the owners of the railways lost $376,000,000 as a result of their return to private operation," said Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age, in an address before the chautauqua institution here today. "The tax payers of the country saved this entire amount and probably more," he added.

Referring to the fact that former Director General of Railroads, W. G. McAdoo, and Director General Walker D. Hines advocated the continued operation of the railroads by the government for a period of two to five years, Mr. Dunn said:

"If government operation and the government guarantees had been continued the rental paid by the government to the railroad companies in the ten months ended June 1921 would have been $742,000,000. In these same ten months the railroads actually earned a net operating income of only $376,000,000, less than the rental the government would have had to pay the railroads if government operation had been continued. Therefore in these ten months the owners of the railroads lost this much as a result of the return of their properties to them, and the tax payers of the country saved this much."

Answering public complaint of the present high railroad rates, Mr. Dunn said that if government operation had continued, the rates possibly would not have been advanced but the tax payers would have had to pay at least $1,150,000,000 to make up the deficit.

"The saving to the public of this huge amount of taxes is surely some offset to the advances in rates," the editor declared. He replied to the freight rate complaints with a similar argument.

Mr. Dunn opposed agitation for early general reductions in rates and the repeal of the provisions of the transportation act under which the present rates were fixed, asserting that the railroads as yet have derived no real benefit from these rate making provisions. He stated that instead of earning a return at the rate of six per cent during the first ten months the present rates were in effect, they earned a return of less than 2 1-2 per cent.

"The public has no right to demand reduction in rates made necessary by high expenses caused by the action of government bodies representing the public itself until the public has removed the conditions created by itself which makes high rates necessary," Dunn declared.

Origin of "Scapegoat."

In accordance with the ancient Jewish ritual, on the Day of Atonement the chief priest symbolically laid the sins of the people on a goat and sent it out into the wilderness.

BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

The Adventures of A Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull

SYNOPSIS.

PROLOGUE.—In December, 1918, four men gathered in a hotel in Berne and heard one of the quartet outline a plan to paralyze Great Britain and at the same time seize world power. The other three, Hocking, American, and Steinemann and Von Gratz, Germans, all millionaires agree to the scheme, providing another man, Hiram Potts, an American, is taken in. The instigator of the plot gives his name as Comte de Guy, but when he leaves for England with his daughter he decides to use the name Carl Peterson.

CHAPTER I.—Capt. Hugh (Bulldog) Drummond, a retired officer, advertises for work that will give him excitement, signing "X10." As a result he meets Phyllis Benton, a young woman who answered his ad. She tells him of strange murders and robberies of which she suspects a band headed by Carl Peterson and Henry Lakington of being the leaders.

CHAPTER II.—Drummond decides to go to The Larches, Miss Benton's home. An attempt is made on the road to wreck his machine when another, occupied by Peterson, Lakington and a strange man, blocks the road. While dining with Phyllis Benton and her father Drummond hears a terrible shriek at The Elms. During the night Drummond leaves The Larches and explores The Elms. He discovers Lakington and Peterson using a thumbscrew on an American who signs a paper. Drummond rescues the American after a struggle and takes him to his home. The man is Hiram C. Potts.

CHAPTER III.—Peterson visits Drummond the next day, departing with a threat to return later and recover Potts and also a torn paper which Drummond seized the night of the fight. With the aid of Peter Darrel, an old army friend, Drummond arranges to hide Potts, and substitute in his place one Mullings, a demobilized soldier, who is seized by Peterson and his gang and taken to The Elms, along with Drummond.

CHAPTER IV.—When Peterson discovers the hoax Drummond is escorted by Irma to a room where he is to stay for the night. During the night Drummond is exploring the house when he gets in a strange room in which is a cobra. He escapes, but on the stairs has a fight in the dark.

CHAPTER V.—Drummond enlists the aid of Algy Longworth, Toby Sinclair, Ted Jerningham and Jerry Seymour, the latter an aviator. Drummond, after an encounter with the pseudo Potts, meets Irma talking to the marquis of Laidley and suspects the gang is plotting for the Laidley jewels. Drummond and his friends are gassed as they sit in his apartment. Lakington carries off Potts.

CHAPTER VI.—When Drummond and his friends recover they plan to again rescue Potts. Drummond goes to see Phyllis and besides learning Potts has been taken to The Elms also becomes engaged to her. Drummond is captured by the gang in the attempted rescue.

CHAPTER VII.—Drummond is held prisoner in The Elms and he hears Peterson making plans to attend a conference at the Ritz. He also hears Peterson and Lakington plotting to make Potts sign an agreement. Drummond on the roof watches as the two plotters begin to torture Potts with a thumbscrew. He yells through the skylight and causes Lakington and Peterson to rush from the room.

CHAPTER VIII.—Potts follows Drummond's advice and escapes to The Larches, where a waiting machine takes him away. Drummond is rescued when a crowd gathers because of the commotion he makes on the roof. He tells Phyllis he must attend the Ritz conference. Drummond has learned that the gang is after the jewels of the duchess of Laidley. He meets Jerome Green, an American detective, in Paris. Green has come to find Potts for his relatives.

CHAPTER IX.

In Which He Has a Near Shave.

ONE.

"Captain, you have me guessing." The American bit the end off another cigar, and leaned back in his chair. "You say that swell Frenchman with the waiters hovering about like fleas round a dog's tail is the reason you came to Paris. Is he kind of friendly with Hiram C. Potts?"

Drummond laughed.

"The first time I met Mr. Potts," he remarked, "that swell Frenchman was just preparing to put a thumbscrew on his second thumb."

"Second?" The detective looked up quickly.

"The first had been treated earlier in the evening," answered Drummond quietly. "It was then that I removed your millionaire pal."

The other lit his cigar deliberately.

"Say, Captain," he murmured, "you ain't pulling my leg by any chance, are you?"

"I am not," said Drummond shortly. "I was told before I met him that the gentleman over there was one of the boys. . . . He is, most distinctly. In fact, though up to date such matters have not been much in my line, I should put him down as a sort of super-criminal. I wonder what name he is passing under here?"

The American ceased pulling at his cigar.

"Do they vary?"

"In England he is clean-shaven, possesses a daughter, and answers to Carl Peterson. As he is at present I should never have known him, but for that little trick of his."

"Possesses a daughter!" For the first time the detective displayed traces of excitement. "Holy Smoke! it can't be him!"

"Who?" demanded Drummond.

But the other did not answer. Out of the corner of his eye he was watching three men who had just joined the subject of their talk, and on his face was a dawning amazement. He waited till the whole party had gone into the restaurant, then, throwing aside his caution, he turned excitedly to Drummond.

"Are you certain," he cried, "that the man who has been monkeying with Potts?"

"Absolutely," said Hugh. "He recognized me; whether he thinks I recognized him or not, I don't know."

"Then what," remarked the detective, "is he doing here dining with Hocking, our cotton trust man; with Steinemann, the German coal man; and with that other guy whose face is familiar, but whose name I can't place? Two of 'em at any rate, Captain, have got more millions than we're ever likely to have thousands."

Hugh stared at the American.

"Last night," he said slowly, "he was foregathering with a crowd of the most atrocious ragged trousered revolutionaries it's ever been my luck to run up against."

"We're in it, Captain, right in the middle of it," cried the detective, slapping his leg. "I'll eat my hat if that Frenchman isn't Franklyn—or Libstein—or Baron Darott—or any other of the blamed names he calls himself. He's a genius; he's the goods. Gee!" he whistled gently under his breath. "If we could only lay him by the heels."

For a while he stared in front of him, lost in his dream of pleasant anticipation; then, with a short laugh, he pulled himself together.

"Quite a few people have thought the same, Captain," he remarked, "and there he is—still drinking highballs."

"You say he was with a crowd of revolutionaries last night. What do you mean exactly?"

"Bolshevists, Anarchists, members of the Do-no-work-and-have-all-the-money brigade," answered Hugh. "But excuse me a moment. Waiter."

A man who had been hovering round came up promptly.

"Four of 'em, Ted," said Hugh in a rapid undertone. "Frenchman with a beard, a Yank, and two Boches. Do your best."

"Righto, Old Bean!" Returned the Waiter, "but Don't Hope for Too Much."

"Righto, old bean!" returned the waiter, "but don't hope for too much."

He disappeared unobtrusively into the restaurant, and Hugh turned with a laugh to the American, who was staring at him in amazement.

"Who the devil is that guy?" asked the detective.

"Ted Jerningham—son of Sir Patrick Jerningham, Bart., and Lady Jerningham of Jerningham hall, Rutland, England," answered Hugh, still grinning. "We may be crude in our methods, Mr. Green, but you must admit we do our best. Incidentally, if you want to know, your friend Mr. Potts is at present tucked between the sheets at that very house. He went there by airplane this morning." He waved a hand toward Jerry. "He was the pilot."

The American was shaking his head a little dazedly. "We've got to get busy on what your friend Peterson's little worry is; we've then got to stop it—some old how. Now, does nothing sort of strike you?" He looked keenly at the soldier. "Revolutionaries, Bolshevists, paid agitators last night, international financiers this evening. Why, the broad outline of the plot is as plain as the nose on your face; and it's just the sort of game that man would love . . ." The detective stared thoughtfully at the end of his cigar and a look of comprehension began to dawn on Hugh's face.

"Great Scott! Mr. Green," he said, "I'm beginning to get you. What was defeating me was, why two men like Peterson and Lakington should be mixed up with last night's crowd."

"Lakington! Who's Lakington?" asked the other quickly.

"Number Two in the combine," said Hugh, "and a nasty man."

"Well, we'll leave him out for the moment," said the American. "Doesn't it strike you that there are quite a number of people in this world who would benefit if England became a sort of second Russia? That such a thing would be worth money—big money? That such a thing would be worth paying through the nose for? It would have to be done properly; your small strike here, and your small strike there, ain't no manner of use. One gigantic syndicalist strike all over your country—that's what Peterson's playing for, I'll stake my bottom dollar. How he's doing it is another matter. But he's in with the big financiers: and he's using the tub-thumping Bolshies as tools. Gad! It's a big scheme"— he puffed twice at his cigar—"a durned big scheme. Your little old country, captain, is, saving one, the finest on God's earth; but she's in a funny mood. She's sick, like most of us are; maybe she's a little bit sicker than a good many people think. But I reckon Peterson's cure won't do any manner of good, excepting to himself and those blamed capitalists who are putting up the dollars."

"Then where the devil does Potts come in," said Hugh, who had listened intently to every word the American had said. "And the duchess of Lampshire's pearls?"

"Pearls!" began the American, when the restaurant door opened suddenly and Ted Jerningham emerged. He seemed to be in a hurry, and Hugh half rose in his chair. Then he sat back again, as with miraculous rapidity a crowd of infuriated head waiters and other great ones appeared from nowhere and surrounded Jerningham.

Undoubtedly this was not the way for a waiter to leave the hotel—even if he had just been discovered as an impostor and sacked on the spot. And undoubtedly if he had been a waiter, this large body of scandalized beings would have removed him expeditiously through some secret buttery-hatch, and dropped him on the pavement out of a back entrance.

Just opposite Hugh he halted, and in a clear voice addressed no one in particular:

"You're spotted. Look out. Legder at Godalming."

Then, engulfed once more in the crowd, he continued his majestic progress, and finally disappeared a little abruptly from view.

"Cryptic," murmured the American, "but some lad. Gee! He had that bunch guessing."

"The ledger at Godalming," said Hugh thoughtfully. "I watched Peterson, through the skylight last night, getting gay with that ledger. I'm thinking we'll have to look inside it, Mr. Green. What about a little dinner at Maxim's? I'm thinking we've found out all we're likely to find, until we can get to that ledger. And thanks to your knowing those birds, Mr. Green, our trip to Paris has been of considerable value."

The American nodded.

"I guess I'm on," he remarked slowly; "but, if you take my advice, captain, you'll look nippy tonight. I wouldn't linger around corners admiring the mud. Things kind o' happen at corners."

TWO.

But on this particular evening the detective proved wrong. They reached Maxim's without mishap, they enjoyed an excellent dinner, during which the American showed himself to be a born conversationalist, as well as a shrewd man of the world. And over the coffee and liquors Hugh gave him a brief outline of what had taken place since he first got mixed up in the affair. The American listened in silence, though amazement shone on his face as the story proceeded. Only when Hugh had finished, and early arrivals for supper were beginning to fill the restaurant, did he sum up the matter as he saw it.

"A tough proposition, captain—d—d tough. Potts is our biggest shipping man, but where he comes on the picture at that moment has me beat. As for the old girl's jewels, they don't seem to fit in at all. All we can do is to put our noses inside that ledger, and see the book of the words. It'll sure help some."

"A Tough Proposition, Captain—D—d Tough."

And as Hugh switched off the electric light in his bedroom, having first seen that his torch was ready to hand in case of emergency, he was thinking of the detective's words. Getting hold of the ledger was not going to be easy—far from it; but the excitement of the chase had fairly obsessed him by now. He lay in bed, turning over in his mind every possible and impossible scheme by which he could get into the secret center room at The Elms. He knew the safe the ledger was kept in; but safes are awkward propositions for the ordinary mortal to tackle. Anyway, it wasn't a thing which could be done in a minute's visit; he would have to manage at least a quarter or half an hour's undisturbed search, the thought of which, with his knowledge of the habits of the household, almost made him laugh out loud. And, at that moment, a fly pinged past his head. . . .

He felt singularly wideawake, and, after a while, he gave up attempting to go to sleep. The new development which had come to light that evening was uppermost in his thoughts; and, as he lay there, covered only with a sheet, for the night was hot, the whole vile scheme unfolded itself before his imagination. The American was right in his main idea—of that he had no doubt; and in his mind's eye he saw the great crowds of idle, foolish men led by a few hot-headed visionaries and paid blackguards to their so-called Utopia. Starvation, misery, ruin, utter and complete, lurked in his mental picture; specters disguised as great ideals, but grinning sardonically under their masks. And once again he seemed to hear the toc-toc of machine-guns, as he had heard them night after night during the years gone by. But this time they were mounted on the pavement of the towns of England, and the swish of the bullets, which had swept like swarms of cock-chafers over No Man's Land, now whistled down the streets between rows of squalid houses. . . . And once again a fly pinged past his head.

With a gesture of annoyance he waved his arm. It was hot—insufferably hot, and he was beginning to regret that he had followed the earnest advice of the American to sleep with his windows shut and bolted. What on earth could Peterson do to him in a room at the Ritz? But he had promised the detective, and there it was—curtains drawn, window bolted, door locked. Moreover, and he smiled grimly to himself as he remembered it, he had even gone so far as to emulate the hysterical maiden lady of fiction and peer under the bed. . . .

The next moment the smile ceased abruptly, and he lay rigid, with every nerve alert. Something had moved in the room. . . .

It had only been a tiny movement, more like the sudden creak of a piece of furniture than anything else—but it was not quite like it. A gentle, slithering sound had preceded the creak; the sound such as a man would make who, with infinite precaution against making a noise, was moving in a dark room; a stealthy, uncanny noise. Hugh peered into the darkness tensely. After the first moment of surprise his brain was quite cool. He had looked under the bed, he had hung his coat in the cupboard, and save for those two obvious places there was no cover for a cat. And yet, with the sort of sixth sense that four years of war had given him, he knew that noise had been made by some human agency. Human! The thought of the cobra at The Elms flashed into his mind, and his mouth set more grimly. What if Peterson had introduced some of his abominable menagerie into the room? . . . Then, once more, the thing like a fly sounded loud in his ear. And, was it his imagination, or had he heard a faint sibilant hiss just before?

Suddenly it struck him that he was at a terrible disadvantage. The thing, whatever it was, knew, at any rate approximately, his position: he had not the slightest notion where it was. And a blind man boxing a man who could see, would have felt just about as safe. With Hugh, such a conclusion meant instant action. It might be dangerous on the floor; it most certainly was far more so in bed. He felt for his torch, and then, with one conclusive bound, he was standing by the door, with his hand on the electric-light switch.

Then he paused and listened intently. Not a sound could he hear; the thing, whatever it was, had become motionless at his sudden movement. For an appreciable time he stood there, his eyes searching the darkness—but even he could see nothing, and he cursed the American comprehensively under his breath. He would have given anything for even the faintest grey light, so that he could have some idea of what it was and where it was. Now he felt utterly helpless, while every moment he imagined some slimy, crawling brute touching his bare feet—creeping up on him. . . . He pulled himself together sharply. Light was essential, and at once. But, if he switched it on, there would be a moment when the thing would see him before he could see the thing—and such moments are not helpful. There only remained his torch; and on the Ancre, on one occasion, he had saved his life by its judicious use. The man behind one of those useful implements is in blackness far more impenetrable than the blackest night, for the man in front is dazzled. He can only shoot at the torch: wherefore hold it to one side and in front of you. . . .

The light flashed out, darting round the room. Ping! Something hit the sleeve of his pajamas, but still he could see nothing. The bed, with the clothes thrown back; the washstand; the chair with his trousers and shirt—everything was as it had been when he turned in. And then he heard a second sound—distinct and clear. It came from high up, near the ceiling, and the beam caught the big cupboard and traveled up. It reached the top, and rested there, fixed and steady. Framed in the middle of it, peering over the edge, was a little hairless, brown face, holding what looked like a tube in its mouth. Hugh had one glimpse of a dark, skinny hand putting something in the tube, and then he switched off the torch and ducked, just as another fly pinged over his head and hit the wall behind.

MEXICO WILL BUY 1500 NEW FREIGHT CARS IN AMERICA

WASHINGTON—Raymond DeNegri director of railways of Mexico, has notified the general officers of the International Association of Machinists here that he will arrive within a few days to take up with them the distribution of contracts with American firms fair to organized labor, for the building of 1500 freight cars and for the furnishing of material and equipment for the repair of 400 locomotives.

DeNegri did not grant an interview to President Vauclain of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, who has been in Mexico City for some weeks trying to get the ear of high officials. Nobody has found time to see him. He is as completely shut out there as the Mexican revolutionists used to be in the United States in the days of President Taft's hobnobbing with Porfirio Diaz.

AMERICA TO SHOW AT BRAZIL EXPOSITION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—American participation in the international exposition at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in 1922, was authorized by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today.

Senator Lodge, Republican, Massachusetts, the committee chairman, was empowered to report a bill providing for such participation in accordance with a request of President Harding and authorizing an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the purpose.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS STILL SATISFACTORY SENATE MEMBERS SAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Vigorous denials of the reported deadlock in the German-American peace negotiations, because of Germany's refusal to concede herself guilty for the world war, were communicated today by the government to the members of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

None of the senators would talk for publication, but privately they stated that they had received positive assurance from the highest officials of the government that the negotiations were proceeding satisfactorily.

BERLIN IS RAPIDLY GROWING DEMOCRATIC

BERLIN, Aug. 20—Two municipal councillors sustained bloody noses and others suffered bruises in a free-for-all fight today over the question of Russian and Upper Silesian relief. After the Communist majority of the city council had voted 100,000 marks for the relief of the Russians the Nationalists proposed an equal sum for the relief of German residents of Upper Silesia. The Communists attempted to shout down the speaker and then the row started. The Upper Silesian relief was not granted.

DR. MARIE EQUI IS GIVEN HER RELEASE

SAN QUENTIN, Calif.—Cheers and sobs from the woman inmates of San Quentin prison marked the release of Dr. Marie Equi after her confinement of nearly a year. During her stay in prison Dr. Equi had endeared herself to her fellow inmates by untiring efforts in their behalf.

She expects to live for a while in San Francisco before returning to her home in Portland, Ore., and to continue her interest in the prisoners, tho by the jail rules she will never be allowed to revisit the penitentiary.

EX-CONVICT WIPES OUT WHOLE FAMILY

PETALUMA, Calif., Aug. 20.—Chas. Hoffer, an ex-convict, early today attempted to wipe out an entire family and then killed himself. Evelyn Grant, 11, is dead, her throat slashed from ear to ear. John Grant, her father, is probably fatally injured from blows and cuts inflicted by an axe wielded by Hoffer. Mrs. Emily Bardenhager, mother-in-law of Grant is near death from axe blows and Leona Grant, 12, is seriously injured.

FORD NOT ALLOWED TO LOWER RY. RATES UNTIL JANUARY 1ST

COLUMBUS, Aug. 20.—The State Utilities Commission today was informed of the recent action of the Inter-State Commerce Commission at Washington, suspending the proposed schedules by the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railroad Company, Henry Ford's road, reducing freight rates 20 per cent.

The suspension continues until January first, pending investigation by the Inter-State Commerce Commission of proposed reduced rates by other roads carrying coal in inter-state traffic.

DIAMOND DUST

Clarence Hodge knocked the Yankees out in nine rounds at Chicago and toppled them from first place.

The Indians were idle.

Ray Powell's home run in the seventh inning with one on gave the Braves a victory over the Cubs.

Jeff Pfeffer would rather beat Brooklyn than aynthing else. He helped the Cards trim his former mates yesterday.

Davy Robertson made two homers in the first Pirate Philly game which Pittsburgh won. The Phils copped the second with Hubbell in fine form.

Extra. The Tigers and Red Sox broke even, proving nothing.

Jess Barnes was given a five run lead against the Reds in the first two innings and McGraw's men managed to hold it for him.

McGraw denies he has bot Bentley, Ogden and Lowery from the Orioles.

SPECIAL ARTICLE TELLS OF SCHEME TO MURDER FIFI

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 20—The Kansas City Post in a copyrighted story today revealed an alleged plot to murder Mrs. Fifi Potter Stillman, one of the principal figures in the Stillman divorce suit. The amazing story was told by Sam Harris, twenty, of New York City, who admits he was hired with four others to put Mrs. Stillman out of the way. He is being held under arrest for investigation of his statements.

Harris, according to the story, was approached at the Mills hotel Seventh av. and Thirty-sixth st. by a Pole named Henry McClusky who told him of the murder plot. He also met John Burke, laborer and an Italian taxi driver named Tony Seracco, who were also in the plot.

"A rich guy living at the Claridge hotel named 'Huntley Clay' wants Mrs Stillman bumped," Harris says the Pole told him.

The price for the killing was to be $25,000 and Harris says he received $800 on account. According to the instructions the men were to meet Mrs. Stillman's automobile as it travelled along the Pelham Road. Mrs. Stillman was to be shot while in her machine according to the story.

While waiting for an opportune time to carry out the plan, however, Harris declared McClusky robbed an apartment on Park av and was chased by detectives.

They decided to beat it, and McClusky bought tickets to Philadelphia. On August 4th, three or four days later, they went to Chicago. There they separated, according to Harris. He said the Pole stopped at the Dearborn hotel under the name of John Caldwell, while the others lived at places on Wabash Avenue.

Harris said he stayed in Chicago until August 16, when the gang split and he came to Kansas City. He exhibited Pullman checks and tleegrams which tend to substantiate his story.

He said that the Stillman divorce case was at its height when he was first approached to join the gang which was to put Mrs. Stillman out of the way.

New York police were notified of the man's story.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Mrs. Fifi Potter Stillman, against whose life an alleged murder plot was revealed by the Kansas City Post was in a serious condition today at the home of Harold F. McCormick in Lake Forest. Members of the McCormick family told the International News Service that Mrs. Stillman was "too ill" to hear the details of the plot.

"Mrs. Stillman's condition is such that I deem it highly inadvisable to bring this matter to her attention at the present time," said Mr. McCormick. "She is in a highly nervous condition, bordering on prostration."

Wounded In Gun Fight

MURPHY, N. C., Aug. 20. — Deputy Sheriff A. Dean and Charles Watson were killed and B. L. Fox was wounded in a gun battle near here last night according to reports reaching here today. A posse is searching for Pearley Hall and Garland Haney who are alleged to have done the shooting. Dean, it is said, attempted to arrest the two and deputized Watson and Fox to assist him.

TONSILS REMOVED

THE UNEMPLOYED

I

There were two groups
Of UNEMPLOYED
That came to Brighton.
There was a band of men
Who came on foot
The sixty miles from London
To plead their case before
The Labor party
They slept wherever they could
For the nights were warm:
They ate WHENEVER they could
Which wasn't often
They held meetings
Down on the sands.
And they came up
Singing the "Internationale
To the Great Dome
Where Labor was meeting,
To tell them to hurry up
And overthrow Capitalism,
Because
They were HUNGRY!
They didn't tell exactly
HOW to do it,
And that was a pity.
For it was quite sure
That SOMETHING
Needed to be done
In a HURRY,
For one of the men
Had FIVE CHILDREN,
And was out of work
For THIRTY WEEKS,
And he was only ONE
Of several millions!

II

There were also
Other unemployed
At Brighton,
Ladies in gay gowns
Of henna and gold,
Sitting in spacious lounges
Reading women's magazines
About the latest fashion
In perfumes,
Or the ways of dyeing hair,
Or the care of the hands,
Or the latest rage
In jewels!
They came from London
By first-class carriage
Or automobile.
They slept in five-dollar rooms
And their meals cost also
Five dollars a day!
And when they went on the beach
They strolled
In little enclosures
Locked in
From the touch of common folks!

III

And I wondered what would happen
If the unemployed on the sands
Should surge into the hotels
To greet
The OTHER UNEMPLOYED,
Saying: "Hail, sisters,
We are neither of us doing
Any USEFUL WORK,
WE
Are the curse of England!"

MORE STATE OIL MEN APPOINTED TO STOP LOSSES

COLUMBUS, Aug. 20. Announcement of the appointment of 11 additional state oil inspectors was made today by State Director of Commerce Phipps

Simultaneously, it was stated that evidence in the hands of Governor Davis and Director Phipps that a minimum of 2,000,000 barrels of oil annually has escaped required state inspection and that this resulted in a net loss to the state of about $300,000 during the last five years has led to the adoption of a new policy designed to obtain for the state this additional revenue.

The new inspectors include J C Hudson; Frank Rose, Warren and Cincinnati, Frank Rose, Warren and Ed. Harvey, East Palestine.

It was stated that Governor Davis authorized the appointment of the new inspectors so as to permit a more intensive inspection of oils. The oil inspection staff now consists of fifteen men. Early in his administration, the Governor cut the number from 41 to four Director Phipps has issued an order aimed to prevent delays in oil inspection which, heretofore, it is claimed, caused much loss to refiners and distributors. According to Director Phipps, increased revenues are certain to follow the more intensified inspection which will more than pay the entire expense of the state bureau of oil inspection

Under the new order all petroleum products in Ohio will be inspected at the refinery instead of at their destination, as heretofore. The products produced outside Ohio must be inspected at their first Ohio destination before being distributed

ONTARIO TO SEIZE BOOZE CONSIGNED TO UNITED STATES

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 20.—Organized rum running between Ontario and Detroit received a knockout blow Thursday night when the Ontario Attorney General's Department ordered seizure of all liquors aboard vessels on the Detroit river where the shipowner cannot satisfy Canadian authorities the shipments have legal destinations. The order materially strengthened the "fighting front" of patrols from both sides of the river, who are attempting to curtail the flow of booze from Canada into the United States. This and a test case on here today to determine the validity of a shipment of 500 cases of beer from Ontario to the United States were the day's outstanding features of the rum-smuggling war.

In the test case the Walkerville Brewing Company is asked to show why the beer seized by Provincial License Inspectors should not be confiscated.

Ontario Attorney General Rainey was quoted in despatches from Toronto as saying that the federal charter granted the Essex Export Company will not guarantee it or other exporting firms against seizure of shipments of liquor which are not made in regular carriers, despite the fact that the Essex charter states it can be its own carter, carrier, custom house agent and forwarder.

CUT THROAT MARKET

independents.

While there has been a slight revival recently in the steel belt here and at Youngstown, Canton and other steel centers, most plants are running only 2 or 3 days a week and with greatly reduced forces of men.

Labor accepted the news of a further cut in wage rates stolidly. A veteran employe of the American Steel & Wire Company, when apprised by the International News Service that a further reduction in wages was coming said.

"I don't know how we'll live but what can we do I have a family of eight, and with living costs as high as they are now, we find it mighty hard to make both ends meet. Too many men are idle to talk of quitting and finding another job, so well just have to make the best of it."

CANTON, O., Aug. 20. — The four big independent steel mills of Canton will not immediately follow the wage cut announced last night by Judge Gary for the Steel Corporation. This statement was made today by G. H. Charls of the United Alloy Corporation. Unskilled labor in the big mills here is being paid at the rate of 27 cents per hour

"We will make no changes now," said Charls "But we do not know what the future will bring forth." The local plant of the steel corporation is waiting word from headquarters before cutting wages to comply with Judge Gary's order. The plant is small and has only a small number of unskilled workers

COLUMBUS, Aug. 20. — Local steel workers are not inconvenienced by the latest wage cut, from 37 to 30 cents an hour, just announced by the United States Steel Corporation

The Carnegie steel plant here, the only local subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, has been shut down completely for some time. At the other local steel plant, operated by the Buckeye Steel Castings Co. about 150 employes are at work with a 27 cent an hour minimum wage prevailing. When operating on a 100 per cent basis, the Buckeye company employs about 2,000 men and the Carnegie company about 3,000 workers.

Lack of orders is blamed by steel company officials here for the present condition of the local plants.

FARMERS DEFLATED

these bankers' testimony made it clear that the railroads had killed the farmer goose that laid their golden eggs.

F.W. Peck of the Minnesota Agricultural college testified that corn is now being used as fuel for power plants in South Dakota because it is cheaper than coal. Seven years ago the product of an acre of land would buy three tons of coal; now it buys one ton. The farmer in the northwest this year will not get enough from his grain to pay taxes and interest.

J. R. Howard, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, which claims 1,250,000 members, said that unless conditions soon are changed for the better—through lower freight rates or higher prices—50 per cent of the tenant farmers in Illinois would be unable to operate next season. They are now in despair at the losses they have suffered and are still facing.

Clyde Reed, chairman of the Kansas State Railroad Commission, opening the duscussion, declared that "Farm products are today far below the normal price level, while railroad rates are 140 per cent above the 1916 level and the ton mile cost of transportation is 240 per cent above the 1913 level. Farm production cannot continue under these conditions We are demanding a rate that the traffic can bear"

WHEELING FAIR WILL BE UNUSUALLY LARGE

The forty-first annual West Virginia State Fair, at Wheeling, which will open September 5th (Labor Day) for six days and nights, will be the most elaborate in the long history of the institution. Liberal increases in premiums are expected to bring out a greatly augmented exhibit in all departments, particularly of live stock and horticultural products. A U. S. government display, exhibits from the state university, state Department of agriculture, county farm bureaus and the 4-H clubs of the state, and a daily demonstration by the state department of mines will be featured. The race program will include sixteen events for the trotters and pacers for purses of $600 and nineteen running races for purses of $400 and $400, with automobile races on Saturday, the last day. The program of attractions, costing $20,000, will be made up of Hippodrome and vaudeville acts, auto polo, bands, two Chicago solosist, fireworks and a magnificent pyro-pageant, "Arabian Nights," with a cast of three hundred characters. This oriental spectacle is a night feature only. Boys' and girls' running races for prizes of $200 and a fine display of school work for liberal premums will be attractions of interest to school people. The midway will have a fine line-up of shows and riding devices, including whip, tango swings, merry-go-around, ferris wheel, shimmy alley, human roulette, and a large number of high class shows. The week will be ushered in by a monster Labor Day celebration. An entire card of running races will make up the Labor Day speed program, and in the event of rain on any other day of the fair, the runners will furnish the speed attraction, so that patrons will not be disappointed in the races, no matter what the weather.

The cost of staging West Virginia's big annual exhibition will run little short of a hundred thousand dollars.
